Here is a list of eight charities you can choose from:

ACRES is a local charity promoting animal welfare. It runs a wide range of activities, from tackling illegal wildlife trade to caring for the rescued animals to ensuring that zoos give their animals proper care, as well as educating the public about animal welfare and encouraging the use of cruelty-free products.

Between 2009 and 2010, their investigations into the illegal tiger parts trade resulted in the largest ever seizure of alleged tiger parts by the authorities in Singapore. Donations go directly into their animal protection programmes. Supporting them helps to protect our precious wildlife from human harm.

Cat Welfare Society is dedicated to promote sterilisation of cats by cat owners, as a means of responsibly controlling the cat population instead of culling.

Watch out their flagship event 'Annual Spay Day' on 28 October 2011. Last year, the number of cats culled fell to an all time low of 5,100, an improvement over 10,000 cats culled in 2004. The bulk of their donations go towards their sterilisation programmes. By supporting them, you are supporting the humane way of treating community cats.

Kampung Senang Education Foundation promotes values that care for people and the environment. It runs a variety of programmes that work with both the young and old. Programmes include facilitating the reuse and recycling of wheelchairs and walking frames among 1,800 needy families, and providing childcare for those from less-privileged families and those whose parents are cancer patients. As of 2010, its services helped more than 21,300 beneficiaries.

By supporting them, you make a difference to the wheelchair-bound, elders, and cancer patients.

SINGAPORE CANCER SOCIETY

Singapore Cancer Society aims to minimise the impact of cancer and increase the public awareness. It provides welfare services, hospices, home care services, screenings, and rehabilitation support. It also gives aid to needy cancer patients by providing subsidies. Since 2005, about $7.87 million has been distributed to more than 2000 such patients. Donations help to fund these subsidies. As cancer is the top killer in Singapore, you will touch the lives of thousands affected, directly or indirectly, by supporting this cause.
